Author Index

Acosta, A. M.	Three-dimensional shoulder kinematics in individuals with C5–C6 spinal cord injury	299–307
Affatato, S.	Fluid absorption study in ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) sterilized and unsterilized acetabular cups	107–111
Alexander, M.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Auger, D. D.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Baidya, K. P.	Advanced textile composite ring for Ilizarov external fixator system	11–23
Baleani, M.	Temperature and ageing condition effects on the characterization of acrylic bone cement	113–118
Baleani, M.	The effect on the fatigue strength of bone cement of adding sodium fluoride	251–253
Barbour, P. S. M.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Barton, D. C.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Baruffaldi, F.	The effect on the fatigue strength of bone cement of adding sodium fluoride	251–253
Bates, C. J.	Flow instabilities in a graft anastomosis: a study of the instantaneous velocity fields	579–587
Bell, J.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Bell, J.	The influence of phospholipid concentration in protein-containing lubricants on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in artificial hip joints	259–263
Besong, A. A.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Besong, A. A.	Contact mechanics of a novel metal-on-metal total hip replacement	543–548
Besong, A. A.	Importance of pin geometry on pin-on-plate wear testing of hard-on-hard bearing materials for artificial hip joints	605–610
Bordini, B.	Fluid absorption study in ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) sterilized and unsterilized acetabular cups	107–111
Bryant, J. T.	The effect of kinematic conditions on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) in orthopaedic bearing applications	95–106
Bryant, J. T.	Three-dimensional metacarpophalangeal joint kinematics using two markers on the phalanx	415–419
Butler, P. B.	Learning motor control in the upright position: a mechanical engineering approach	315–323
Carus, D. A.	The design of a five-degree-of-freedom powered orthosis for the upper limb	275–284
Cattaneo, P. M.	A three-dimensional finite element model from computed tomography data: a semi-automated method	203–213
Ceroni, R. G.	In vitro testing of the primary stability of the VerSys enhanced taper stem: a comparative study in intact and intraoperatively cracked femora	75–83
Cho, M.-H.	Disc hydration measured by magnetic resonance imaging in relation to its compressive stiffness in rat models	497–501
Chua, C. K.	Fabrication of porous polymeric matrix drug delivery devices using the selective laser sintering technique	191–201
Chua, L. P.	Scaling laws for wall shear stress through stenoses under steady and pulsatile flow conditions	503–514
Chuang, L. Y.	The application of the neural network on Morse code recognition for users with physical impairments	325–331
Clift, S. E.	Finite element biphasic indentation of cartilage: a comparison of experimental indenter and physiological contact geometries	487–496
Conway, B. A.	A novel instrumented ring for the measurement of grip force adjustments during precision grip tasks	421–427
Cornwall, G. B.	The effect of kinematic conditions on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) in orthopaedic bearing applications	95–106
Coveney, V. A.	Suprapubic track pressure and force–deformation measurements in a (live) human subject and in animal models post-mortem	39–49
Cristofolini, L.	In vitro testing of the primary stability of the VerSys enhanced taper stem: a comparative study in intact and intraoperatively cracked femora	75–83
Cristofolini, L.	Temperature and ageing condition effects on the characterization of acrylic bone cement	113–118

© IMechE 2001

Cristofolini, L.	The effect on the fatigue strength of bone cement of adding sodium fluoride	251–253
Cristofolini, L.	A CAD–CAM methodology to produce bone-remodelled composite femurs for preclinical investigations	459–469
Cristofolini, L.	Design revision of a partially cemented hip stem	471–478
Cristofolini, L.	Interface biomechanics of the Anca Dual Fit hip stem: an in vitro experimental study	555–564
Dalstra, M.	A three-dimensional finite element model from computed tomography data: a semi-automated method	203–213
Douglas, W.	The development of the Edinburgh modular arm system	291–298
Dowson, D.	The effect of femoral head diameter upon lubrication and wear of metal-on-metal total hip replacements	161–170
Dowson, D.	New joints for the Millennium: wear control in total replacement hip joints	335–358
Driessen, B. J. F.	MANUS—a wheelchair-mounted rehabilitation robot	285–290
Du, Z. H.	Fabrication of porous polymeric matrix drug delivery devices using the selective laser sintering technique	191–201
Earthrowl-Gould, T.	Chest and abdominal surface motion measurement for continuous monitoring of respiratory function	515–520
Elfick, A. P. D.	The effect of socket design, materials and liner thickness on the wear of the porous coated anatomic total hip replacement	447–457
Ensaff, H.	Polymerization shrinkage of dental composite resins	367–375
Essner, A.	Effect of contact stress on friction and wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in total hip replacement	133–139
Evers, H. G.	MANUS—a wheelchair-mounted rehabilitation robot	285–290
Farmer, I. R.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Farrar, R.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Farrar, R.	Contact mechanics of a novel metal-on-metal total hip replacement	543–548
Firkins, P. J.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Fisher, J.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Fisher, J.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Fisher, J.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Fisher, J.	The influence of phospholipid concentration in protein-containing lubricants on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in artificial hip joints	259–263
Fisher, J.	A novel three-dimensional tissue equivalent model to study the combined effects of cyclic mechanical strain and wear particles on the osteolytic potential of primary human macrophages in vitro	479–486
Fisher, J.	Importance of pin geometry on pin-on-plate wear testing of hard-on-hard bearing materials for artificial hip joints	605–610
Fowler, N. K.	The development of a modular humeral prothesis locking mechanism	229–236
Fowler, N. K.	Reciprocating gait prosthesis for the bilateral hip disarticulation amputee	309–314
Fowler, N. K.	Long-term measurement of metacarpophalangeal joint motion in normal and rheumatoid hand	549–553
Frich, L. H.	A three-dimensional finite element model from computed tomography data: a semi-automated method	203–213
Gardner, T. N.	Comparative two- and three-dimensional finite element modelling techniques for tibial fractures	255–258
Geggie, C.	The development of the Edinburgh modular arm system	291–298
Gentle, C. R.	Computational studies of 'whiplash' injuries	181–189
Gepi-Attee, S.	Suprapubic track pressure and force–deformation measurements in a (live) human subject and in animal models post-mortem	39–49
Goldsmith, A. A. J.	The effect of femoral head diameter upon lubrication and wear of metal-on-metal total hip replacements	161–170
Golinski, W. Z.	Computational studies of 'whiplash' injuries	181–189
Gow, D. J.	The development of the Edinburgh modular arm system	291–298
Green, S. M.	Some failure modes of four clinical bone cements	359–366
Green, S. M.	The wear of metal-on-metal total hip prostheses measured in a hip simulator	523–530
Gregg, P. J.	Some failure modes of four clinical bone cements	359–366
Gröver, D.	Suprapubic track pressure and force–deformation measurements in a (live) human subject and in animal models post-mortem	39–49
Hall, R. M.	The effect of socket design, materials and liner thickness on the wear of the porous coated anatomic total hip replacement	447–457
Han, S.-M.	Disc hydration measured by magnetic resonance imaging in relation to its compressive stiffness in rat models	497–501

© IMechE 2001

Hansson, C. M.	The effect of kinematic conditions on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) in orthopaedic bearing applications	95–106
Harwin, W.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Heitplatz, F.	Computational studies of 'whiplash' injuries	181–189
Ikeuchi, K.	A new medical microrobot for minimal invasive surgery	215–220
Ingham, E.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Ingham, E.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Ingham, E.	The influence of phospholipid concentration in protein-containing lubricants on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in artificial hip joints	259–263
Ingham, E.	A novel three-dimensional tissue equivalent model to study the combined effects of cyclic mechanical strain and wear particles on the osteolytic potential of primary human macrophages in vitro	479–486
Jacobsen, P. H.	Polymerization shrinkage of dental composite resins	367–375
Jagatia, M.	Elastohydrodynamic lubrication analysis of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene hip joint replacements under squeeze-film motion	141–152
Jagatia, M.	Elastohydrodynamic lubrication analysis of metal-on-metal hip prostheses under steady state entraining motion	531–541
Jalali-Vahid, D.	Elastohydrodynamic lubrication analysis of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene hip joint replacements under squeeze-film motion	141–152
Jin, Z. M.	Elastohydrodynamic lubrication analysis of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene hip joint replacements under squeeze-film motion	141–152
Jin, Z. M.	Elastohydrodynamic lubrication analysis of metal-on-metal hip prostheses under steady state entraining motion	531–541
Jin, Z. M.	Contact mechanics of a novel metal-on-metal total hip replacement	543–548
Jin, Z. M.	Importance of pin geometry on pin-on-plate wear testing of hard-on-hard bearing materials for artificial hip joints	605–610
Johnson, G. R.	The design of a five-degree-of-freedom powered orthosis for the upper limb	275–284
Johnson, G. R.	Learning motor control in the upright position: a mechanical engineering approach	315–323
Jones, B.	Chest and abdominal surface motion measurement for continuous monitoring of respiratory function	515–520
Jones, N.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Jones, V. C.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Kaddick, C.	Hip simulator wear testing according to the newly introduced standard ISO 14242	429–442
Kirsch, R. F.	Three-dimensional shoulder kinematics in individuals with C5–C6 spinal cord injury	299–307
Klein, R.	Effect of contact stress on friction and wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in total hip replacement	133–139
Konrad, R.	In vitro comparison of the two hard–hard articulations for total hip replacements	153–160
Lee, J.-K.	Disc hydration measured by magnetic resonance imaging in relation to its compressive stiffness in rat models	497–501
Lee, R.	Contact mechanics of a novel metal-on-metal total hip replacement	543–548
Lee, S.-Y.	Disc hydration measured by magnetic resonance imaging in relation to its compressive stiffness in rat models	497–501
Leong, K. F.	Fabrication of porous polymeric matrix drug delivery devices using the selective laser sintering technique	191–201
Leverment, J. N.	An in vitro assessment of tissue compression damage during circular stapler approximation tests, measuring expulsion of intracellular fluid and force	589–597
Ling, K. V.	Magnetic tracker calibration for an augmented reality system for therapy	51–59
Liu, C.	Some failure modes of four clinical bone cements	359–366
McCaskie, A. W.	Some failure modes of four clinical bone cements	359–366
McGuire, J.	An in vitro assessment of tissue compression damage during circular stapler approximation tests, measuring expulsion of intracellular fluid and force	589–597
Major, R. E.	Learning motor control in the upright position: a mechanical engineering approach	315–323
Marsden, D. C.	The development of a modular humeral prothesis locking mechanism	229–236
Matthews, J. B.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Matthews, J. B.	A novel three-dimensional tissue equivalent model to study the combined effects of cyclic mechanical strain and wear particles on the osteolytic potential of primary human macrophages in vitro	479–486
Miller, K.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Miller, M. R.	Chest and abdominal surface motion measurement for continuous monitoring of respiratory function	515–520

© IMechE 2001

Minari, C.	The effect on the fatigue strength of bone cement of adding sodium fluoride	251–253
Mishra, S.	Comparative two- and three-dimensional finite element modelling techniques for tibial fractures	255–258
Mitchell, C. A.	A comparative evaluation of dental luting cements by fracture toughness tests and fractography	65–73
Mitchell, W.	A novel three-dimensional tissue equivalent model to study the combined effects of cyclic mechanical strain and wear particles on the osteolytic potential of primary human macrophages in vitro	479–486
Molfetta, L.	Improved mathematical model of the wear of the cup articular surface in hip joint prostheses and comparison with retrieved components	377–391
Monteith, E.	The development of the Edinburgh modular arm system	291–298
Monti, L.	In vitro testing of the primary stability of the VerSys enhanced taper stem: a comparative study in intact and intraoperatively cracked femora	75–83
Monti, L.	Interface biomechanics of the Anca Dual Fit hip stem: an in vitro experimental study	555–564
Moorcroft, C. I.	A fracture movement monitoring system to aid in the assessment of fracture healing in humans	405–414
Murray, S. J.	Reciprocating gait prosthesis for the bilateral hip disarticulation amputee	309–314
Ng, E. Y. K.	An improved three-dimensional direct numerical modelling and thermal analysis of a female breast with tumour	25–37
Ng, E. Y. K.	Unsteady viscous flow model on moving the domain through a stenotic artery	237–249
Ng, E. Y.-K.	Effect of blood flow, tumour and cold stress in a female breast: a novel time-accurate computer simulation	393–404
Ng, W. S.	Magnetic tracker calibration for an augmented reality system for therapy	51–59
Nguyen, T.	Predictive rheological models for the consolidation behaviour of articular cartilage under static loading	565–577
Nicol, A. C.	The development of a modular humeral prothesis locking mechanism	229–236
Nicol, A. C.	Reciprocating gait prosthesis for the bilateral hip disarticulation amputee	309–314
Nicol, A. C.	A novel instrumented ring for the measurement of grip force adjustments during precision grip tasks	421–427
Nicol, A. C.	Long-term measurement of metacarpophalangeal joint motion in normal and rheumatoid hand	549–553
O'Connor, J. J.	A comparison between automatically generated linear and parabolic tetrahedra when used to mesh a human femur	85–94
O'Doherty, D. M.	Polymerization shrinkage of dental composite resins	367–375
O'Doherty, D. M.	Flow instabilities in a graft anastomosis: a study of the instantaneous velocity fields	579–587
Ogrodnik, P. J.	A fracture movement monitoring system to aid in the assessment of fracture healing in humans	405–414
Oloyede, A.	Predictive rheological models for the consolidation behaviour of articular cartilage under static loading	565–577
Orr, J. F.	A comparative evaluation of dental luting cements by fracture toughness tests and fractography	65–73
Painter, D.	Suprapubic track pressure and force–deformation measurements in a (live) human subject and in animal models post-mortem	39–49
Parrini, G.	The design of a five-degree-of-freedom powered orthosis for the upper limb	275–284
Phua, K. K. S.	Fabrication of porous polymeric matrix drug delivery devices using the selective laser sintering technique	191–201
Pichora, D. R.	Three-dimensional metacarpophalangeal joint kinematics using two markers on the phalanx	415–419
Pietrabissa, R.	Improved mathematical model of the wear of the cup articular surface in hip joint prostheses and comparison with retrieved components	377–391
Pinder, I. M.	The effect of socket design, materials and liner thickness on the wear of the porous coated anatomic total hip replacement	447–457
Poiner, R.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Polgar, K.	A comparison between automatically generated linear and parabolic tetrahedra when used to mesh a human femur	85–94
Pontrelli, G.	Blood flow through an axisymmetric stenosis	1–10
Quan, Y. X.	A new medical microrobot for minimal invasive surgery	215–220
Raffelini, F.	Improved mathematical model of the wear of the cup articular surface in hip joint prostheses and comparison with retrieved components	377–391
Rahman, M.	Advanced textile composite ring for Ilizarov external fixator system	11–23
Rahman, T.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Raimondi, M. T.	Improved mathematical model of the wear of the cup articular surface in hip joint prostheses and comparison with retrieved components	377–391

© IMechE 2001

Ramakrishna, S.	Advanced textile composite ring for Ilizarov external fixator system	11–23
Ramanathan, R.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Rieker, C.	In vitro comparison of the two hard–hard articulations for total hip replacements	153–160
Ritchie, A.	Advanced textile composite ring for Ilizarov external fixator system	11–23
Ryan, A. K.	A comparative evaluation of dental luting cements by fracture toughness tests and fractography	65–73
Sample, W.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Santambrogio, C.	Improved mathematical model of the wear of the cup articular surface in hip joint prostheses and comparison with retrieved components	377–391
Scattareggia Marchese, S.	The design of a five-degree-of-freedom powered orthosis for the upper limb	275–284
Scavina, M.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Scholes, S. C.	The wear of metal-on-metal total hip prostheses measured in a hip simulator	523–530
Schön, R.	In vitro comparison of the two hard–hard articulations for total hip replacements	153–160
Seedhom, B. B.	Modelling femoral curvature in the sagittal plane: a cadaveric study	221–228
Seliktar, R.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Siauw, W. L.	Unsteady viscous flow model on moving the domain through a stenotic artery	237–249
Small, C. F.	Three-dimensional metacarpophalangeal joint kinematics using two markers on the phalanx	415–419
Smith, S. L.	A five-station hip joint simulator	61–64
Smith, S. L.	The effect of femoral head diameter upon lubrication and wear of metal-on-metal total hip replacements	161–170
Smith, S. L.	An in vitro wear study of alumina–alumina total hip prostheses	443–446
Speirs, A. D.	Three-dimensional metacarpophalangeal joint kinematics using two markers on the phalanx	415–419
Spence, W. D.	Reciprocating gait prosthesis for the bilateral hip disarticulation amputee	309–314
Stallard, J.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Stephenson, P.	Modelling femoral curvature in the sagittal plane: a cadaveric study	221–228
Stewart, D.	The development of the Edinburgh modular arm system	291–298
Stone, M. H.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Stone, M. H.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Stone, M. H.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Stone, M. H.	The influence of phospholipid concentration in protein-containing lubricants on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in artificial hip joints	259–263
Stone, M. H.	A novel three-dimensional tissue equivalent model to study the combined effects of cyclic mechanical strain and wear particles on the osteolytic potential of primary human macrophages in vitro	479–486
Stroud, S.	Towards the control of a powered orthosis for people with muscular dystrophy	267–274
Sudharsan, N. M.	An improved three-dimensional direct numerical modelling and thermal analysis of a female breast with tumour	25–37
Sudharsan, N. M.	Effect of blood flow, tumour and cold stress in a female breast: a novel time-accurate computer simulation	393–404
Taylor, W. R.	Finite element biphasic indentation of cartilage: a comparison of experimental indenter and physiological contact geometries	487–496
Teo, K. O. M.	Fabrication of porous polymeric matrix drug delivery devices using the selective laser sintering technique	191–201
Thomas, P. B. M.	A fracture movement monitoring system to aid in the assessment of fracture healing in humans	405–414
Tian, X.	Magnetic tracker calibration for an augmented reality system for therapy	51–59
Tipper, J. L.	Influence of simulator kinematics on the wear of metal-on-metal hip prostheses	119–121
Tipper, J. L.	A novel method for the prediction of functional biological activity of polyethylene wear debris	127–132
Tipper, J. L.	The influence of phospholipid concentration in protein-containing lubricants on the wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in artificial hip joints	259–263
Toni, A.	In vitro testing of the primary stability of the VerSys enhanced taper stem: a comparative study in intact and intraoperatively cracked femora	75–83
Toni, A.	Fluid absorption study in ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) sterilized and unsterilized acetabular cups	107–111
Toni, A.	Temperature and ageing condition effects on the characterization of acrylic bone cement	113–118
Toni, A.	A CAD–CAM methodology to produce bone-remodelled composite femurs for preclinical investigations	459–469
Toni, A.	Design revision of a partially cemented hip stem	471–478

© IMechE 2001

Truong, T.-K.	The application of the neural network on Morse code recognition for users with physical impairments	325–331
Unsworth, A.	A five-station hip joint simulator	61–64
Unsworth, A.	An in vitro wear study of alumina–alumina total hip prostheses	443–446
Unsworth, A.	The effect of socket design, materials and liner thickness on the wear of the porous coated anatomic total hip replacement	447–457
Unsworth, A.	The wear of metal-on-metal total hip prostheses measured in a hip simulator	523–530
Valeggi, R.	The design of a five-degree-of-freedom powered orthosis for the upper limb	275–284
van der Helm, F. C. T.	Three-dimensional shoulder kinematics in individuals with C5–C6 spinal cord injury	299–307
van der Kamp, M.	A novel instrumented ring for the measurement of grip force adjustments during precision grip tasks	421–427
Vandelli, C.	Fluid absorption study in ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene (UHMWPE) sterilized and unsterilized acetabular cups	107–111
Viceconti, M.	A comparison between automatically generated linear and parabolic tetrahedra when used to mesh a human femur	85–94
Viceconti, M.	Design revision of a partially cemented hip stem	471–478
Viceconti, M.	Interface biomechanics of the Anca Dual Fit hip stem: an in vitro experimental study	555–564
Waide, V.	A CAD–CAM methodology to produce bone-remodelled composite femurs for preclinical investigations	459–469
Walsh, W.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Wang, A.	Effect of contact stress on friction and wear of ultra-high molecular weight polyethylene in total hip replacement	133–139
Warner, M. D.	Finite element biphasic indentation of cartilage: a comparison of experimental indenter and physiological contact geometries	487–496
Watkins, N. D.	Some failure modes of four clinical bone cements	359–366
Williams, D.	Flow instabilities in a graft anastomosis: a study of the instantaneous velocity fields	579–587
Williams, I. R.	Quantification of third body damage to the tibial counterface in mobile bearing knees	171–179
Wimmer, M. A.	Hip simulator wear testing according to the newly introduced standard ISO 14242	429–442
Woerden, J. A. v.	MANUS—a wheelchair-mounted rehabilitation robot	285–290
Woollam, P. J.	An infant reciprocal walking orthosis: engineering development	599–604
Wright, I C.	An in vitro assessment of tissue compression damage during circular stapler approximation tests, measuring expulsion of intracellular fluid and force	589–597
Xue, Q.	Scaling laws for wall shear stress through stenoses under steady and pulsatile flow conditions	503–514
Yang, C.-H.	The application of the neural network on Morse code recognition for users with physical impairments	325–331
Yang, C.-H.	The application of the neural network on Morse code recognition for users with physical impairments	325–331
Yoshinaka, K.	A new medical microrobot for minimal invasive surgery	215–220
Yu, S. C. M.	Scaling laws for wall shear stress through stenoses under steady and pulsatile flow conditions	503–514
Zee, B. Y.	Three-dimensional metacarpophalangeal joint kinematics using two markers on the phalanx	415–419
Zhou, Y. S.	A new medical microrobot for minimal invasive surgery	215–220

© IMechE 2001